“There have been an abundance of transformative moments for me in my training as a Resident with the Mercy Family Medicine Program, but as a female provider and, more importantly, a human being, none have been quite as earth shattering in nature as my work with survivors of human trafficking.

The patients I have seen through our human trafficking program test me to the core: they require...(and deserve) more empathy than I previously thought I had, and call for more creativity and sensitivity in treating and preventing disease...I am a better doctor and person for it.”
